President Lincoln's Rabbi And Other Short Stories Eric Kwoczka

President Abraham Lincoln is fraught with angst upon meeting a virtuous Rabbi. Not having been exposed to the Jewish Religion Lincoln befriends the Rabbi and makes him a close confidant. Other short stories include Chaim Greidinginger's Magic Glasses about a young boy who foretells the future until his glasses are removed. Also, Some OF My Best Friends, a short story of two gentleman who were grade school rivals growing up in New York. They have a chance encounter when one of the two is now a Doctor and the other seeks medical advice. This book easily coincides with the 200th birthday of President Abraham Lincoln and the journey President Barak Obama's life took in order to achieve the Presidency.
