Hate the kids your kid hangs out with? Do you believe the saying that you are known by the company you keep? Want a jock and have a nerd hanging out with other nerds? Or vice a versa? Want a prom queen but the friends she picks are Goth? The angst of friends gets worse when your child brings home that “One true love.”

This book gives lessons in the fine art of dealing with the friends you hate and the heartthrob you want to banish from your sight forever.

Do not expect advice geared to convincing your child to switch groups or trade heartthrobs just because you say so. Those days are definitely over; however, as Katherine Gordy Levine shows you, there are definitely a few dos and do nots that can keep the relationships from bonding as if joined by crazy glue.

Katherine Gordy Levine is not only a licensed therapist, former professor, and director of mental health crisis teams, she and her husband have cared for over three hundred foster children, mostly teens and each in trouble with the law. Her suggestions are both clinically sound, but also based on practice experience. She knows what works and what doesn't work. Moreover, she is on the side of all parents.
