Cal McKinley had to accept it. He was as dead as the president who shared his last name. He'd finally found a job as an IT jock at the Responsive Research Institute. Instead, he ends up dead, possibly murdered. But he doesn't get it. If he's dead, why is he still at the Institute? Why is he still hungry? Why does Helene, a 1918 mill worker look so damn hot? Is this heaven? Hell? Cal searches for the cause of his death and instead discovers the real work at the Institute. For this, he conquers second death and finds a love unknown during his shortened life.
