Robert 'Rob' Hawke saw himself as a free spirit but the reality was that he was a 34 year old ex Judo champion with a flair for languages.

After a few turbulent years as a Special Forces pilot and with a gift for causing trouble his career finally crash landed in Cairo. Now working as an interpreter he was approached by his old boss and dragged reluctantly into the world of spies and industrial espionage.

Someone was stealing America's secrets and a small group of powerful men had devised a plan to find the spy by creating the most expensive decoy in American history to try to tempt him into the open.

They called it the Erebus Project; named after the primordial Greek God of darkness who was born of Chaos. With the trap baited they waited and watched but it was not until an unassuming bookkeeper asked the right questions that their plan began to work and the spy emerged from the mists of deception where Rob Hawke waited, poised to strike.
